The Shipping and Commercial Liss of a 1 recent date says: "The feature of the grocery market has been the further advance established in the value of both raw and refined sugar, with a fresh quickening in the demand for the latter, which has absorbed the accumulation and afforded an opportunity for increasing production. Every renewal of the demand for raw sugar seems only to develop the strength of the situation and establish a higher level of values, which, contrary to expectations, fail to bring to establish a higher level of values, which, contrary to expectations, fail to bring to the surface any hidden supplies. Every revision of the statistics only emphasizes the fact that the world's visible supply will all be required for actual consumption between now and the commencement of the new crop year. Very much higher prices than now prevail seem to be inevitable when the season of the heaviest consumption arrives."
